Prime Minister's strategic priorities for the honours system

The honours system is there to recognise those exceptional individuals who have committed themselves to serving and helping the UK and ensure that those who have made an outstanding contribution in their sector, are rewarded.

The Prime Minister is determined to make sure our honours represent the length and breadth of the country. He wants to ensure the “levelling up” of the Honours system so that it captures every corner of the UK - particularly regions that have too often been underrepresented.

The Prime Minister would like to see the honours system especially recognise those:

- who provide high quality, responsive healthcare, built around patient needs;
- who deliver the highest possible standards in education;
- who deliver meaningful change locally in tackling crime and improving their community;
- who support families to contribute to society and help children achieve their potential;
- public servants who have delivered an outstanding service to the people of the United Kingdom and Overseas, supported the levelling up agenda and provided exceptional value to the taxpayer;
- entrepreneurs and innovators who create thriving businesses and deliver growth across the country;
- philanthropists and those who give their expertise and help support public sector, cultural and charitable institutions.

Mr Sunak reaffirmed that honours should be awarded on ‘merit first’ – those who give service above and beyond their job. There should be representation from the length and breadth of the country, reflecting the incredible contributions made across every part of the United Kingdom.

Diversity and Equality of opportunity

Diversity of opportunity is something the Cabinet Office cares passionately about.

Applications are encouraged from all candidates regardless of ethnicity, religion or belief, gender, sexual orientation, age, disability, gender identity. We particularly welcome applications from women, those with a disability, those from a black or ethnic minority background and those living outside of London and the South East. We want to explore the widest possible pool of talent for these important appointments.

Offering an Interview to Disabled People (GIS scheme)

Location

Meetings are usually held in London.

Background to the Honours System

The modern honours system is intended to recognise merit, achievement and excellence in all areas of UK life. The Prime Minister of the day sets strategic priorities for the honours system. Successive recent Prime Ministers have asked that the system honours people who give service above and beyond – and not those who are just doing their job.

Honours lists are published twice a year at New Year (usually 30 or 31 December) and on the Sovereign's Official Birthday (currently the middle of June). Three separate lists comprise the half-yearly list:

- the Prime Minister's List – managed by the Cabinet Office. This list is for those contributing to the UK. It consists of around 1,300 people (although some people living outside the UK may also be considered);
- the Overseas and International List – managed by the Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Office (FCDO). This is for members of the Diplomatic Service and for those UK citizens working in the UK's interests abroad. It consists of around 150 people; and

- the Defence Services List – managed by the Ministry of Defence (MOD). This is for members of the Armed Forces, consisting of around 200 people.

There are ten independent committees which assess nominations for the Prime Minister's List. The majority of awards recommended by the honours committees are in the Order of the British Empire.

Typically, the Prime Minister's List is made up of around 30 people appointed as Dames or Knights, with around 120 people awarded a CB/CBE. These are considered the highest honours and in all they represent no more than 15% of the list.

The overwhelming majority of people recognised will receive OBEs, MBEs and BEMs, and generally represent those who have made valuable contributions at a relatively local level.

Role of the Independent Committees

Honours committees meet twice a year, in advance of each honours list being published. Your commitment as a committee chair is to attend the meetings, two between January and March for a Birthday honours round and two between September and October for a New Year honours round. There is extensive pre-reading for each committee meeting.

As an honours committee Chair, you are asked to:

- attend each honours committee meeting whenever possible;
- read and develop views the honours committee papers in advance of the meeting;
- play a role in supporting Government departments to build pipelines of possible future nominees in your area of expertise;
- act as an ambassador for the honours system in outreach activities, particularly by promoting the honours system through your professional networks.

As chair, we ask you to also:

- attend the Main Honours Committee of all the independent chairs to agree recommendations for the whole honours list;
- participate in recruitment of new independent committee members as needed;
- convene and participate in at least one formal pipelining meeting a year with nominating departments.

Committee members act independently, recommending honours candidates to the Prime Minister and His Majesty The King.

Nominations are assessed case-by-case on their specific merits. This is a high profile area of work, which attracts considerable public and media interest.

Committees are supported by the Honours and Appointments Secretariat, which currently consists of approximately 25 team members who are based in the Cabinet Office.

Much of the committees' work is undertaken at the four-yearly honours committees, held in London with an option to video conference into the meeting.

Current committee membership can be found at www.gov.uk/honours.

About the Sport Committee

The Sport Committee is one of ten specialist honours committees which assess honours nominations put forward by members of the public, government departments and professional bodies.

The Committee has to select those it wishes to recommend to the Prime Minister and The King for inclusion in the New Year and Birthday Honours Lists.

The Committee considers candidates for honours in the following areas of service:

- Participants; coaches; referees; administrators; umpires; keep fit teachers; gymnasts; broadcasters; disability sports men and women, grass-roots volunteers.

About the Cabinet Office

The Cabinet Office supports the Prime Minister and ensures the effective running of government. The Department is the corporate headquarters for government, in partnership with HM Treasury, and takes the lead in certain critical policy areas.

The Cabinet Office has responsibility for:

- supporting collective government, helping to ensure the effective development, coordination and implementation of policy;
- supporting the National Security Council and the Joint Intelligence Organisation, coordinating the government's response to crises and managing the UK's cyber security;
- promoting efficiency and reform across government through innovation, better procurement and project management, and by transforming the delivery of services;
- promoting the release of government data, and making the way government works more transparent;

Standards in public life, political activity, disqualification from appointment and conflicts of interests

Standards in public life

Members of the independent honours committees will need to confirm that they understand the standards of probity required of public appointees outlined in the "Seven Principles of Public Life drawn up by the Committee on Standards in Public Life (see Appendix 1 below).

Political Activity

Members of the independent honours committees will need to show political impartiality during their time on the committee and must declare any party political activity they undertake in the period of their appointment.

Due to the nature of independent honours committees it is not appropriate for independent members of the committee to occupy paid party political posts or hold sensitive, senior or prominent positions in any political organisation. Nomination for election to political office, for example, the House of Commons, the Northern Ireland Assembly, Scottish Parliament, the European Parliament, is not considered compatible with membership of independent honours committees.

Subject to the above, committee members are free to engage in political activities, provided that they are conscious of their general responsibilities and standards for public life and exercise proper discretion.

You are required to fill out a Political Activity Declaration as part of your application (please see monitoring forms), which will be kept separate from your application and will only be seen by the selection panel prior to interview. However, it is appreciated that such activities may have given you relevant skills, including experience gained from committee work, collective decision-making, resolving conflict and public speaking. If, therefore, you have had such experience and you consider it relevant to your application for this post, you should include it separately in the main body of your application.

If you are successfully appointed to the post, details of your response to the Political Activity Declaration will be included in any announcement of your appointment.

Disqualification from appointment

Anyone in the categories listed below will not be considered for appointment as a chair of an independent honours committees (also see 'Political Activity' above):

- Employed in the Civil Service of the state
- Unspent criminal convictions
- Bankruptcy
- Disqualification as a company director.

Conflict of interests

The Honours and Appointments Secretariat maintains a register of committee members' interests to avoid any danger of the committee member being influenced - or appearing to be influenced – by their private interests in the exercise of their duties. Candidates invited to interview will be questioned about any real or perceived conflicts of interest. These do not constitute an automatic bar to appointment, but they must be manageable.
